

portfolio

The tracery of young trees provides a dramatic contrast and natural touch to the geometric shapes all around them at the REED (Resources for Effective Educational Development) Academy, Oakland, NJ, a public school for children with autism. Architecture: Claire Weisz, AIA, WXY Architecture + Urban Design, New York. General contractor: River Drive Construction Co., Elmwood Park, NJ. Landscape architects: Starr Whitehouse Associates, New York.